THE JAPAN FOUNDATION GALLERY

LEVEL 4 (ACCESS VIA LIFT) CENTRAL PARK, 28 BROADWAY CHIPPENDALE NSW 2008

Photographer Tomohiro Muda took his camera to the towns decimated by a powerful tsunami in March 2011. He searched through the debris to find small, everyday objects that the receding waters left behind. This poignant series of photographs records the state of these objects, which tell the gravity of loss and separation that the disaster caused.

This exhibition is a part of our upcoming event program, After 3.11: Have you met the new Japan?, commemorating the 5th anniversary of the tragedy.

Tomohiro Muda was born in Nara prefecture in 1956. In 1980, he graduated from Waseda University, and in 1982 began living in and photographing a Sherpa village in the Himalayas. Since his 1988 exhibition The Land of Sherpa, he has searched far and wide for the "primordial connection between human, nature and space," and a variety of other phenomena, releasing them in exhibitions and books.
